Biblical Counselling

Conference feedback

~ John Kerr

"If there was no angry God, there would be no cure for human anger"

- Christopher Ash.

On 21 February Lisa and I joined over 300 other delegates at the annual Biblical Counselling UK residential conference, held in Swanwick. The vision of BCUK is to help Christians connect the rich resources provided for us in the Gospel with the realities of everyday life. This year the conference focussed on the theme of anger, a subject that is irrelevant to no-one. The guest speaker was respected author and Bible teacher Christopher Ash, who gave four sessions to help us understand and approach anger from a biblical perspective. Apart from the main sessions there were also topical sessions from other speakers on a variety of issues from domestic abuse and anger in marriage, to the victim mindset and bitterness.

The teaching was profound and helpful, the singing was loud and joyful and the fellowship was warm and plentiful (not to mention the food!). Lisa and I were greatly helped by the conference and have returned feeling spiritually refreshed.

If you'd like to know more about the ministry of BCUK, please speak to me or Lisa, or else visit their website <https://www.biblicalcounselling.org.uk>.
